

1. M.S. Degree Program in Nutrition

Note the two highlighted corrections in the section below.

Dietetic Internships (DI)

The Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics ACEND accredited Dietetic Internship (DI) at Brooklyn College is a two-semester program that provides the supervised practice experience required to sit for the Registered Dietitian Nutritionist (RDN) examination. Students must be enrolled in the M.S. in nutrition program or the M.A. in Community Health (Foods and Health Equity) program to be eligible for the DI, and they must file a separate application through DICAS (Dietetic Internship Central Application System). Students who have completed a Didactic Program in Nutrition and Dietetics (DPD) from an ACEND (Accreditation Council for Education in Nutrition and Dietetics) - accredited program may also apply to the Brooklyn College Dietetic Internship (DI). Completion of 18 credits in the MA Food and Health Equity program is required prior to the start of the DI program. The DI provides students with 12 elective credits and the supervised practice needed to sit for the Registered Dietitian-Nutritionist (RDN) exam administered by the Commission on Dietetic Registration (CDR).

2. M.A. Degree Program in Education: Spanish Teacher (7–12) HEGIS code 1105.01; SED program code 26800

Concentration C is being withdrawn. The substance of the concentration will continue to exist as an Alternative Certification (Transitional B) program in its own right, as it has existed hitherto.

The Alternative Certification (Transitional B) is as follows:

M.A. degree program in education: Spanish teacher (7–12)
HEGIS code 0899.50; SED program code 26803

This program is for candidates who have a baccalaureate degree in a liberal arts and sciences major, with a minimum of 18 credits in Spanish who are teaching or have secured a position teaching Spanish and qualify for New York State Alternative Certification as a Teacher of Spanish, 7–12. Candidates with fewer than 18 credits in Spanish in this program may be required to take additional coursework in Spanish language and literature prior to graduation.

Degree requirements: 33 credits

Spanish (12 credits):

Candidates must complete the following courses in Spanish: Spanish 7010X, 7510X or 7520X; a course in Latin American literature; and a course in Peninsular Spanish literature as approved by the chair or deputy chair of the Department of Global Languages, Literatures, and Cultures.

Education Core (12 credits):

The following four education courses are required unless candidates have taken one or more as part of previous coursework. Foundations: SEED 7500X; Literacy: SEED 7503X or CBSE 7692T; Special Education: SEED 7671X; Development and SEL: SEED 7507X.

Student Teaching (0 credits):

Students pursuing New York State certification via Transitional B must work as a Teacher of Spanish 7–12 in the designated district and be observed by Brooklyn College faculty as required by Alternative Certification requirements in New York State. Working teachers must still register for SEED 6002T for up to four semesters. In addition, candidates must complete a Teacher Performance Assessment SEED 7541.

Spanish Education (9 credits):

The following Spanish education courses, or Spanish education courses approved by the program coordinator, are required unless candidates have taken one or more as part of previous coursework: SEED 7620T, SEED 7621T, SEED 7622T.

Students must also complete a substantial final project, which may take the form of a thesis in Spanish, or may consist of a "teaching unit" completed under the co-direction of the Department of Global Languages, Literatures, and Cultures, and the School of Education. The writing of the thesis or completion of the teaching unit may take place during a three-credit tutorial, Spanish 7790G, taken as the final course of the student's program. Spanish 7790G, however, is not a required course for the degree.

Courses in the Department of Global Languages, Literatures, and Cultures, and the School of Education offered toward the degree must be 7000-level courses. The program of study must be approved early in the first semester by the chair or deputy chair of the Department of Global Languages, Literatures, and Cultures, and the Department of Secondary Education.
